

A successful Philip Leverhulme Prize application in the field of languages and literature from 2019

Cite as: Martin Paul Eve, "A successful Philip Leverhulme Prize application in the field of languages and literature from 2019", eve.gd: Martin Paul Eve, March 20, 2025, <https://doi.org/10.59348/ddjk0-hep80>.

LEVERHULME
TRUST _____

I am making a concerted effort to make grant applications that I have written openly available. We are far too secretive about these, because we don't like to expose the cases where we "failed" (didn't get the grant). I am no different to anyone else in this respect - it's not gratifying to have to unveil that you applied for 50,000 grants and only got 1 of them. But it's more realistic. So I'll try to put up some "failures", too. (Where that wouldn't compromise anybody or any relationship.)

Today, I'm sharing my successful Philip Leverhulme Prize application in the field of languages and literature from 2019 so that people can get a sense of what you need to do and how you need to write it.

You can find the application on KC Works or in BIROn.

The "internal statement" was, if I remember rightly, the document I wrote for the "internal" competition at the university. The actual Leverhulme form was then based on that.